The factors influencing your pension choices

Planning the best way to draw your pension savings is not straightforward, after all, there's no 'one size fits all' when it comes to retirement.

Life expectancy, the impact of inflation and the choices available at retirement (thanks to the 2015 Pension Freedoms) are all influencing factors in your decision making. You'll also need to take into account not just your pension savings but any other investments or assets you might have.

Your pension choices
If you're aged 55 or over and in a defined contribution pension plan from 6 April 2015, you may be able to access your pension savings in a number of different ways:

- Buy an annuity
- Flexi Access Drawdown
- Uncrystallised Funds Pension Lump Sum (UFPLS)

If you decide not to purchase (or defer the purchase of) an annuity and instead take income using Flexi-access drawdown or UFPLS, adopting the right investment approach and keeping it regularly under review will be all important.

A question of balance
Balancing the potentially conflicting needs of income production and capital preservation is vital. Equally important is an understanding that personal circumstances will change throughout your retirement.

The three 'stages' of retirement

The early years
You're more active and therefore might want flexibility over how you draw your income.

The middle years
You're getting slightly less active and your lifestyle has settled into a more stable routine, so you'll need a more stable income level.

The later years
You may need to increase your income to cover, for example, the cost of care.

In all cases, investing and withdrawing in a way that aims to maximise the available tax benefits and minimise tax 'leakage'could help make your objectives easier to achieve. If you have some decisions to make about accessing your savings and, whether and how to continue to invest, it might help to consider:

The extent to which you would like to leave an inheritance for your family and dependants

Gifts - either now or in the future.

Your current essential income needs such as your day-to-day living expenses and other "known/planned" expenditure.

Your lifestyle and other "non-essential" expenditure such as holidays, new cars, sports and hobbies, entertainment etc.

Unexpected items such as car repairs, home maintenance and health problems.

Your current health status

Future possible anticipated living expenses incorporating, possibly, a budget for care.

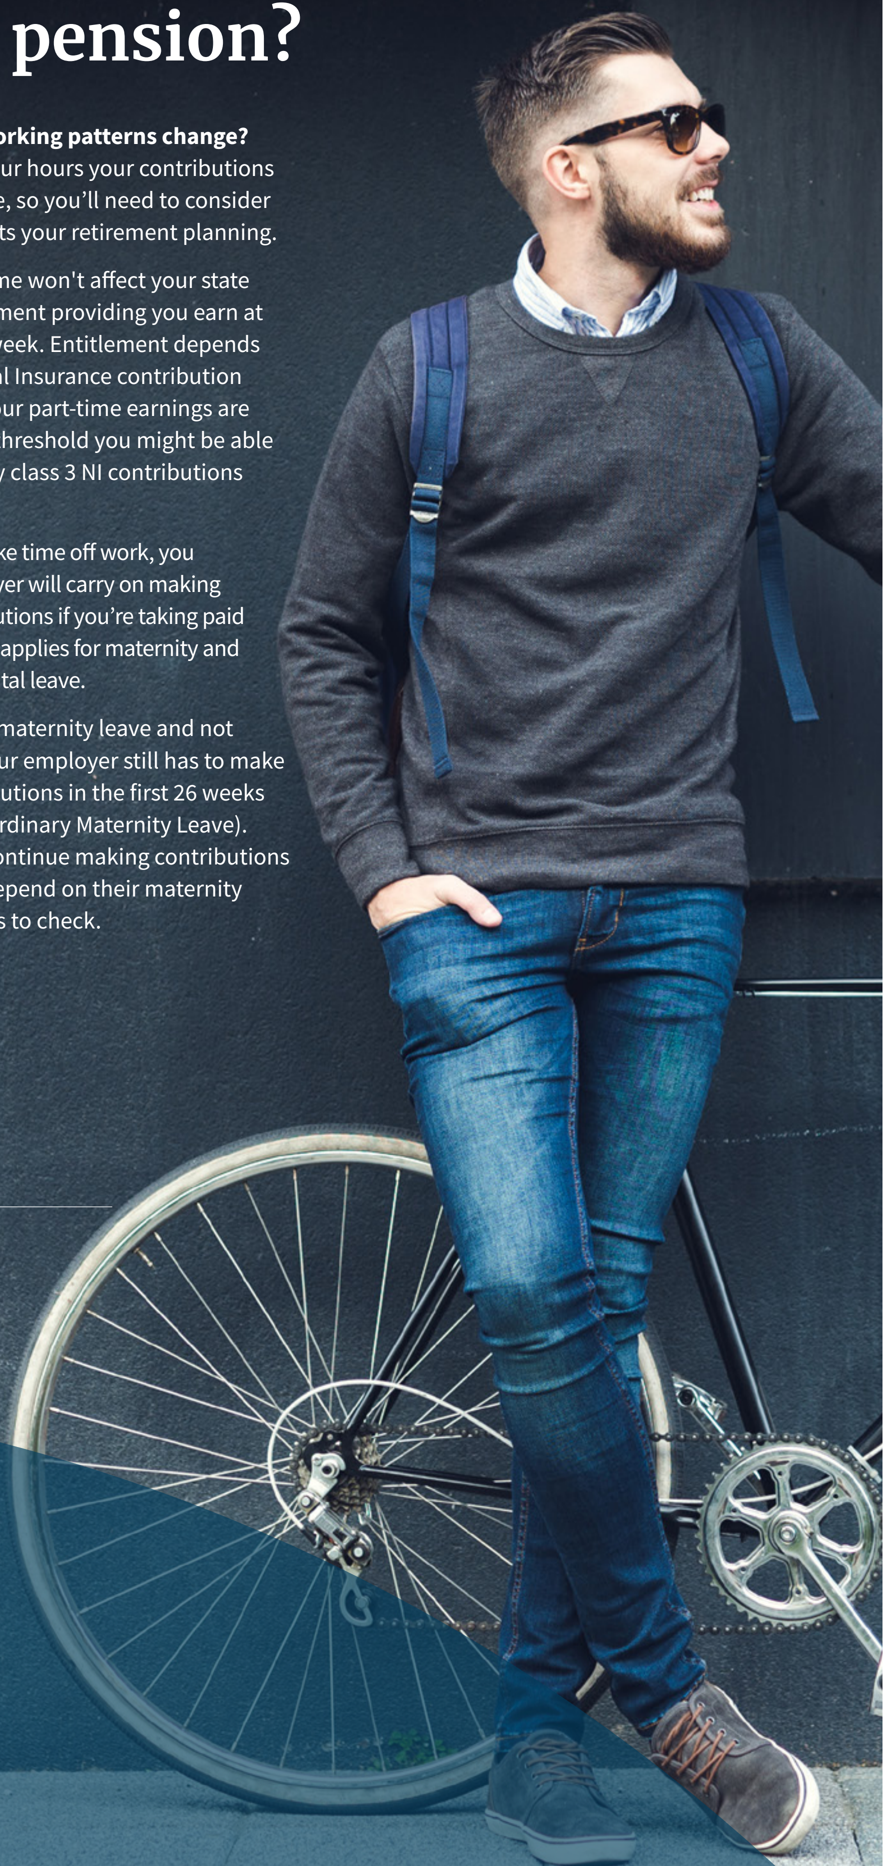
How will changing working patterns affect your pension?



The sooner you start saving, the healthier your pension pot is likely to be when you need to draw on it.

But what happens to your pension planning if your working hours reduce, or stop?

First things first

If you join a company you may be enrolled into their workplace pension scheme which, in most cases, your employer will also pay into. The self-employed, on the other hand, should set up a personal pension, which come in the form of a basic personal pension, stakeholder pension, or Self Invested Personal Pension (SIPP).

Workplace pension schemes will have minimum contribution levels, but you should save more if you can. In fact, some commentators suggest that if you take the age you start your pension and halve it, that's the percentage of salary you should save each year.

What's more, as your earnings increase it makes sense to save more into your pension if you can afford to. There's no limit on how much you save, but there are limits on the amount of tax relief you'll receive.

What if your working patterns change?

If you reduce your hours your contributions may also reduce, so you'll need to consider how that impacts your retirement planning.

Working part time won't affect your state pension entitlement providing you earn at least £166 per week. Entitlement depends on your National Insurance contribution history and if your part-time earnings are lower than the threshold you might be able to pay voluntary class 3 NI contributions to plug the gap.

If you need to take time off work, you and your employer will carry on making pension contributions if you're taking paid leave. The same applies for maternity and other paid parental leave.

If you're taking maternity leave and not getting paid, your employer still has to make pension contributions in the first 26 weeks of your leave (Ordinary Maternity Leave). Whether they continue making contributions after that will depend on their maternity policy, so it pays to check.

To find out how much your retirement might cost, it's helpful to ask yourself:

- When do you want to retire?
- What do you want from your retirement?
- How will your spending habits change?
- Would you move, or stay in your current home?
- Will you continue doing some form of paid work after retirement?
- Will you be entitled to the full State Pension?

Whether you're employed, self-employed, part time or full time, please get in touch with us to explore your pension planning options.

The insurance policy that could prove critical

Some people might be put off buying a critical illness policy because they believe it's unlikely to pay out, despite the proportion of claims paid by insurers standing at just over 92%.

So why is there such a gap between perception and reality among consumers?

There have been well-publicised stories in the past where a policyholder has had a claim refused because their circumstances didn't meet the insurer's terms and conditions. But in reality, the number of critical illness claims declined are actually a tiny minority compared to the total paid out. Take a look at these numbers from 2017 from some of the UK's leading insurers:

Insurer	% of critical illness claims paid
Aviva	93%
Zurich	95%
Vitality	92%
Legal and General	92%
LV=	89%

Reasons why an insurer may not pay a claim:

- The policyholder didn't inform the provider about important medical or health information when they took out the policy
- The condition claimed for didn't meet the definition within the plan
- The policyholder tried to claim for conditions that were excluded from their plan

Separating fact from fiction

A critical illness policy pays out a tax free lump sum on diagnosis for any of the specified serious illnesses – around 100, including cancer, heart attack or stroke. There are additional benefits available with these policies which can be life-changing when called upon.

The cover might seem costly; a policy from Aviva for a 35-year-old non-smoker needing £200,000 cover over 25 years would cost £64 a month and it gets more as you get older but the value of this type of protection makes it absolutely worth considering. In fact, the Association of British Insurers reported that a total of 96% of critical illness claims made for cancer were paid out across the industry, demonstrating the positive impact these products can have during the worst of times.

The insurance market can be complex and confusing. Price comparison sites can make it easier to search and compare critical illness policies, but there's such a large choice and variety of products and you might end up paying for something that doesn't quite fit your circumstances.

Don't leave it to chance, seek professional, face-to-face advice from someone who will get to know your circumstances, your family history and your likely protection requirements and recommend critical illness cover that's right for you.

Investing for the next generation

In the early years this might translate into a surplus of toys or days out, but this stage eventually passes and thoughts turn towards the future transition from child to adulthood and beyond.

This longer-term perspective raises the question of how best to provide financial support through, what could be an expensive transition and inevitably this leads to a variety of issues:

- Are there particular needs which should be targeted or is it more important to have money available as and when your child needs it?
- Which investments would be appropriate?
- Is it possible to put some parental or other controls in place for when children can access the investment?
- Which are the most tax-efficient investments?

Investing for life's key events

For today's children, the path through the early years of adulthood might cost rather more than that of their parents - and grandparents:

Higher education may be seen to be more important for gaining a reasonable job, but it also comes at a much higher cost. Taking into account tuition fees, accommodation and living expenses, a three-year degree is likely to cost the poorest students more than £50,000 according to a 2017 Institute of Fiscal Studies report. Before 1998, there were only grants and loans for tuition fees did not begin until 2006. Your generation may have left university with a bank overdraft, but the sum owing probably pales into insignificance compared to the five figure debts faced by today's graduates.

Marriage is an increasingly costly staging post for those who choose it. According to the annual wedding survey by Bridebook.co.uk the average cost of a wedding in 2018 was just over £30,000! Despite the cost, two thirds of couples questioned in the survey admitted to either going over budget or having no budget at all.

Getting on the first rung of the property ladder is another growing cost for the next generation. According to research by Halifax, first time buyers are having to find record deposits, with the national average exceeding £33,000. It's no surprise people are having to leave it until later to buy their first home.

Once they have the degree, the job and the home (and the mountain of debt), there's another long-term financing requirement which today's children will encounter: retirement provision.

Take expert advice

Two principles that apply to many aspects of financial planning are particularly relevant when thinking about children:

1. The sooner you start the better, and the more scope there is for investments to grow (although there's still no guarantee that they will).

2. Take expert advice before making any decisions. The right investment set up in the wrong way can be worse than the wrong investment set up in the right way. DIY planning is not to be recommended, given the potential pitfalls.

Is joint life cover best for couples?

If you want to help make sure your loved ones will have financial security if you pass away, life insurance cover is the answer. But, if you're part of a couple and you both need cover, should you take out single policies, or a joint policy that covers both of you?

With a single life policy, the insurer would pay out on the death of the policyholder and the policy would then lapse. With joint life insurance, however, the cover will apply to both policyholders and would pay-out either on the first or second death, depending on how the policy is set up.

Before you decide whether to take out single or joint life insurance policies, you'll need to decide what type of cover you need, and this will depend on your circumstances:

- Term Assurance: pays out a lump sum if you die within the agreed 'term' (ie. the amount of time you've chosen to be covered for). Term Assurance is typically taken out to protect a mortgage and, as such, can come with a level, or decreasing, sum assured - the latter reducing as you pay off your mortgage.
- Whole of Life Insurance: pays out a lump sum when you die, whenever that is - as long as you're still paying the premiums.
- Family Income Benefit Insurance: pays out a regular income, instead of a lump sum, to provide ongoing financial support for those who depend on you.

You could also add critical illness cover to your life insurance policy, which means you'll get a pay-out if you're diagnosed with a serious illness and your claim is accepted. The type of conditions covered can include cancer, heart attack and stroke and will depend on the insurance provider.

Weighing up the benefits

Once you've agreed on the right type of cover, there are a number of other factors to consider to determine whether single, or joint life cover is best for you and your other half, including:

- Cost: a joint life policy may be less expensive than two single life policies. Level of cover - if your partner earns more than you you might want them to have a higher level of cover, since the financial impact of their death would be greater than yours. In this respect two policies may be better as they will have different sums assured.
- Existing cover: either, or both of you may have existing life cover through your employer, or an existing plan. It's important to check what's already in place so that you have a true picture of your protection shortfall. You don't want to pay for something that's already covered.
- Your relationship: It's not necessarily something you want to think about but some insurers include a separation benefit. This means if your relationship breaks down during the policy term, you could cancel it and start two individual policies without having to provide additional medical information.

If you're not sure whether single or joint life cover is best for you, or you'd like to review your existing cover, please get in touch.

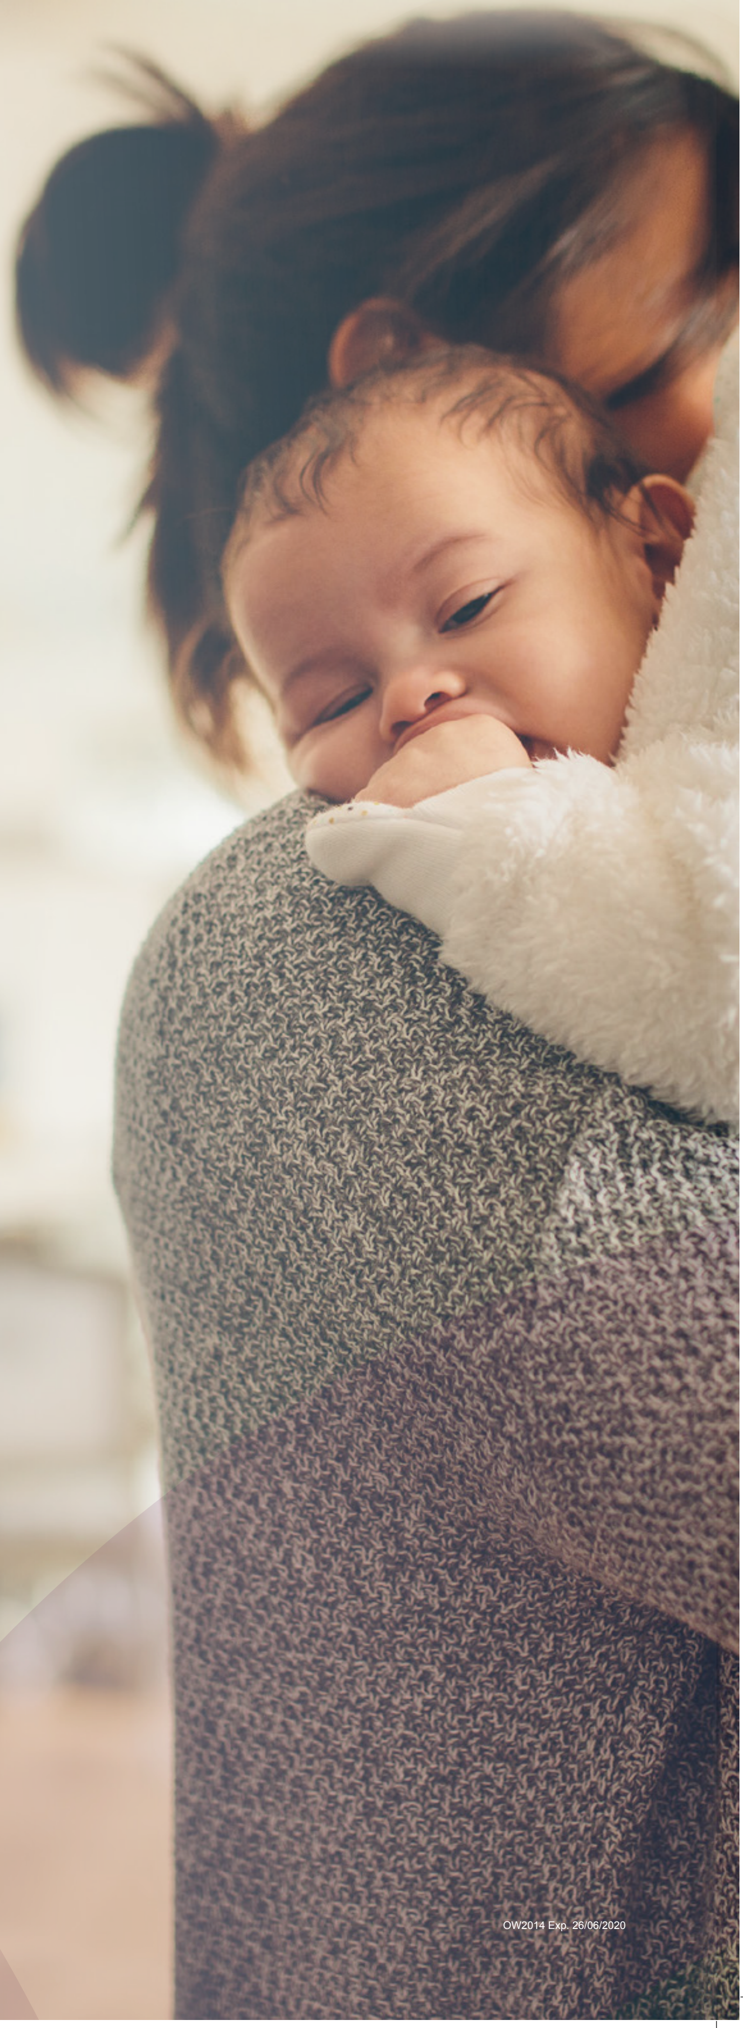
Income Protection claims

You might believe you'd be more likely to call on your income protection policy later in your working life, but data from protection insurer, The Exeter, show their average claimant was 40, and on certain products, just 33.

Income protection is designed to pay an income if you're unable to work as a result of an accident, illness, or, with some policies, unemployment. The benefit usually kicks in after what's called a deferred period and can last until you're able to return to work or you retire.



Cover for physical, and non-physical conditions

Every year, one million workers will have to stop work due to prolonged sickness or injury, but the number having to take a break because of mental health issues is sadly growing. As well as revealing the surprisingly young age of some of their claimants, The Exeter said that mental health-related issues were accounting for a growing number of its claims; reaching 10% in 2018.

The Association of British Insurers (ABI) had previously reported that mental health was the most common cause of claim on income protection policies in 2017; perhaps unsurprising given that one in four of us in the UK will be affected by a mental health problem in any given year.

Whether your reason for claiming on your income protection policy is physical or mental, having cover in the first place is crucial – especially if you have a mortgage or people who rely on your income.

Income protection tips

Check if your employer provides cover as part of your employee benefits. If so, how much do they provide and for how long?

If you need to take out separate cover, don't leave it too long; the younger you are, the cheaper the policy.

Make sure the cover you take out complements your existing cover. For instance, if your work policy ends after six months, choose a six-month deferred period.

If you're self-employed, you might consider a shorter deferred period since you'll have no employer's cover. You might have savings that could see you through the first few weeks or months of being unable to work.

When lightning strikes

In July 2015, Mark received a call from someone telling him his house in County Durham was in flames and that a team of firefighters were currently at the scene.

He hung up – first, not quite believing what he'd heard was true – it must be a work colleague playing a prank! But when the police called back, Mark soon realised this wasn't a joke; it was a real problem that required his urgent attention.

Mark had moved out of the house and in with his partner a few months earlier, and was currently renting it out, hoping it might be a good investment. From the moment he took the call though, he started to worry he might have made a big mistake.

The cause of the fire was a lightning bolt, which had gone straight through the roof and into one of the bedrooms. The house was now uninhabitable and, as well as having a significant re-build project on his hands, Mark also had his tenants to consider, not to mention a potential loss of rental income that was currently covering his mortgage payments.

Fortunately, Mark had taken out appropriate insurance with a financial adviser at his local estate agent. They had recommended specialist Landlord's cover with Paymentshield, knowing that it was competitively-priced and that he would be covered should the property become uninhabitable.

Obviously the repairs to the house weren't going to happen overnight, which meant that Mark's tenants would need to be re-housed. Fortunately, his insurance covered the referencing fees to help them find a new property and, to Mark's amazement, it also covered his loss of rent while the work was being carried out.

Mark still had a mortgage on the property and relied on the rent to meet his monthly payments, so knowing he would continue to receive this income was a huge relief. He didn't even have to get too involved with restoring the property; the Paymentshield insurance team managed all the details and kept him fully updated on progress. Other than a small excess, Mark's claim pay-out covered the majority of the work.

It's not every day you get a phone call at work to say that your house is on fire after being struck by lightning.

But that's the whole point of insurance; it's there to protect you when the unexpected happens.

Luckily for Mark, he was covered by this random act of nature, but without the right advice and the right policy, he might not have been so lucky.
